Androscoggin

Saturday afternoon, the Main Central freight train ran into one of the teams of the Wurtumbo Company at Lisbon Falls. The jigger was demolished, the horse somewhat hurt, but the driver escaped. The driver was crossing the track in advance of a train that was backing up, when the accident occurred. The team was dragged some three rods along the track before the train stopped.

Mr J H Adams, of Portland, brakeman on the Grand Trunk, had his right hand so badly mutilated while shifting cars, that it had to be amputated.

Henrique Aine, who for eight years has been Spanish consul at Portland, left for Montreal Saturday, with his family. He will sail from Montreal, Wednesday, on the steamer Vancouver for England.

Mr J Burton Millikan, who has been the Herald's correspondent of the Portland Sunday Times for several years is shortly to start on an almost around the world trip. He will take the Canadian Pacific Railroad to Vancouver B C from thence to all points where he will spend a few weeks at each, then he will sail for Yokohama, Japan passing the winter in that country and returning home in the spring.

Saturday morning, at ten o'clock, the schooner Henry Morgenthau left Portland for the fishing grounds. When a short distance off the Cape, a school of mackerel struck the fishing vessel near Portland, this season was first sighted. In the afternoon the weather began to look rather threatening and with a fresh northeast wind was blowing. The sails as necessary for the schooner to ride the storm of the hour, which was raging as she could not run in the meantime, however, a few fishing vessels remarkably fine mackerel and nearly barrels of other fish, the whole netting the vessel some $300, which to members of the crew received about $40 for his share of the catch. The men feel that it was a good day's work and hope to meet with more such luck.

Policeman Philip C Stoll, of the New York steamboat squad, who died on Sunday, had saved thirty people from drowning.

According to Dr Erasmus Wilson, great authority on hair, any one who is threatened with baldness, if it has made much headway can check the decay by rubbing a little salted vaseline and sulphur on the spot at night and wash it with quinine every morning.

William Hardee of Hunter county, says his great-great-great-grandmother, Nancy Couch, is one hundred and two years old. She lives in Jasper county with her granddaughter, Mrs [illegible] Holloway, who is about eighty years old. She is just as spry, lively and quick as most women of fifty or sixty.

There is reported to be a wonderful mirage in Glacier Bay, Alaska, reflected from the glassy surface of the Pacific glacier. Just after the change of the moon in June, soon after sunset and while the moon is climbing above the sky, a ship appears above the glacier. It is so distinct that a photograph is said to have been made this season by a resident of Juneau who learned of the mirage from the Indians and has seen it appear and disappear for four years.

It is reported that a method has been discovered of refining sugar by electricity which will revolutionize the business. A refinery has been erected in Brooklyn to work the new process, which was discovered by a German. The cost of refining by this process, as compared with the old, is said to be as seventy cents to four dollars, and the time consumed in the refining is ten minutes to twenty-six hours. The Philadelphia Ledger is authority for the statement.

The Philadelphia Inquirer states that after six months diligent labor Dr H Weaver, Demonstrator of Anatomy at Homeopathic College in that city, completed a model of all the nerves in the human body exactly in the position they occupy in life. No other complete model or museum in the world has such a specimen. Some idea can be formed of the labor involved when it is remembered that the human body contains upwards a million of nerves of various sorts.

"Mr Brief," said the Judge grimly, "cause to me that you are wasting the time of the court." "I am trying to do so, your honor," replied Brief, "as the Court believes that two and two do not make four." Brief scratched his eyebrow a little more firmly on his nose and ejaculated blandly: "May it please your honor, I am prepared to do that small sum, make it twenty-two." The face of a smile played around the corners of the Judge's mouth as he sat back in his chair and said: "You may go on with your argument, Mr Brief."

According to the reports received here from New York and Washington despatches to the Boston Traveller, a great deal of trouble is being experienced by the managers of the Democratic campaign in keeping ex-Congressman Frank Hurd, of Ohio, on the stump. Mr Hurd is a rank free trader, pure and simple, and insists upon talking nothing but free trade when he appears upon a public forum. Party managers are considerably alarmed over the demand for his services in certain portions of the West, notably Iowa and Minnesota, and they are attempting to suppress him. Mr Hurd says his own way when he goes anywhere to talk, and his friends say that he can and will do it, please.

How leading Democratic papers of three principal cities are in the campaign are three trusted correspondents in each—two Connecticut and New Jersey with the intention of doing New York [illegible] They were to talk with representative men of all parties and report the exact situation in the respective States—one to supply his paper with a "boiled down" of a page for each of the smaller States and two pages for New York. The editors were to report daily as the canvass went on. The three correspondents sent concerning Connecticut and New Jersey came to New York, [illegible] and from them I learn the result of their different reports were a trifle contemptuous of the Times. The paper which wanted the broad view decided a [illegible] point then and there as strongly against each correspondent without say a word of New York. One of the correspondents on reaching New York reported to his paper that he could not remain in New York to canvass the case as he was [illegible] his paper's money without being able to send the editor any matter favorable enough for use in a Democratic paper. [illegible] The other correspondent did not [illegible] but was told by him that it was [illegible] to remain in New York and [illegible] confidential reports of the other States. Nothing of the facts presented by these correspondents was published in a single one of their journals.
